

IF RADICAL MUSLIMS AREN'T FOUND AT KOSHER DELIS, THEN WHY DID NYPD LOOK FOR THEM AT KOSHER BUTCHERS?

[youtube]uih94gNcH-k[/youtube]

Congressman Peter King applauds that the NYPD is spying on—among others—some of his own Long Island constituents, including 28 businesses in Oyster Bay. He rather snidely quips that you wouldn't look for radical Muslims at a kosher deli.

Ray Kelly and the NYPD should get a medal for what they are doing. They are—This is good police work. If you are going after radical Muslims you don't go to Ben's Kosher Deli.

There's just one problem with that—a big one.

Among the businesses the NYPD profiled are at least five kosher butchers, delis, or restaurants not far from King's home in Long Island (as well as several other stores, including food stores, run by Great Neck, NY's Iranian Jewish population).

- Emouna Glatt Kosher Meat
- Shish Kabob Palace, which uses Glatt Kosher meats
- Kandi King Gourmet store
- Great Neck Glatt
- Eilat Prime Meats

So Peter King suggests it would be stupid for the NYPD to look for radical Muslims at kosher delis. But he's still celebrating the NYPD for having done just that.

(h/t George Zornick)