

INCENDIARY LAWSUIT ALLEGING MORE TRUMP OBSTRUCTION SHOWS BENGHAZI BOOSTER ADMITTING HE HAS NO CREDIBILITY

The African American former cop that Fox blamed for its retracted Seth Rich story, Rod Wheeler, has sued the network and a Fox associate and GOP rat-fucker, Ed Butowsky, for defamation and discrimination.

The suit is designed to be very inflammatory, using the claims Butowsky made about President Trump's personal involvement pushing the story to attract attention (and increase the pain for Fox).

If this effort to shift blame for the DNC hack hadn't already attracted Robert Mueller's attention, I suspect it will now (and I suspect Wheeler will be very happy to testify).

In fact, though, Wheeler well documented his claim that Butowsky and Fox' journalist, Malia Zimmerman, fabricated two quotes from him and then refused to retract attribution to him. So the lawsuit may well have legs.

But I'm amused by two other details Wheeler includes in the suit. First, he shows Butowsky, a Dallas-based financial advisor, claiming to have revealed most of what we know about Benghazi.

"I appreciate you reading this text message. We have many mutual friends including Adam Housley and many others from Fox News. Although I'm not a paid fox contributor, I do appear frequently on the News channel as well as the business channel. I watched your work for years and admire what you wearing [sic] on television. Behind the scenes I do a lot of work, (unpaid) helping to uncover certain stories, my biggest work was revealing most of what we know today about Benghazi. I'm looking for some assistance on something that happened in Washington I would appreciate if you would give me a call at 972.XXX.XXXX. Of all the people you have met in your line of work you have put me right next to those you view as the most confidential. I am extremely discreet. Is there a time I can give you a call this morning?"

So the douchebag behind the Seth Rich – Wikileaks conspiracy is also the douchebag behind Benghazi.

Which is nifty, because Wheeler also includes quotes of Butowsky admitting he has no credibility.

"The story is up or will be up very early tomorrow morning. Rod Wheeler is up and ready to give interviews. There's more to come on the story but for now this is a massive story there's [sic] going to be talked about for a long time. If you have any questions about the story or more information needed, call me at 972-XXX-XXXX. I'm actually the one who's been putting this together but as you know I keep my name out of things because I have no credibility. One of the big conclusions we need to draw from this is that the Russians did not hack our computer systems and

Wheeler then goes on to allege that Butowsky threatened to extort Sy Hersh.

Butowsky deleted his Twitter account this morning (though not yet his Tumblr account), so perhaps he recognizes that he's at some financial exposure.

But I'm grateful that, in the process, he has admitted that he – and his Benghazi pseudo-scandal – have no credibility.