

THE DOCUMENTS THE WHITE HOUSE TURNED OVER

I wanted to pull this information, from the John Dowd's letter to Robert Mueller, to lay out how the White House has categorized document requests from Mueller. Dowd boast the "Records voluntarily produced to your office by the White House total over 20,000 pages." Here's what those records like, arranged by Bates series.

The Flynn documents

The categories start with Flynn, including an astounding 2,572 pages related to Sean Spicer's comments to the press on Jim Comey from May 3, 2017 (in the press briefing that day Spicer downplayed the threat Russia posed to the US).

- FBI Interview of Michael Flynn at the White House on January 24, 2017 (SCR001), 9 documents, 66 pages;
- Communications of DAG Sally Yates, DOJ, FBI, & WH regarding Michael Flynn (SCR002), 28 documents, 64 pages;
- Communications between White House staff regarding the FBI's investigation into Russian interference or James Comey (SCR003), 53 documents, 248 pages;
- The resignation of Michael Flynn (SCR004), 311 documents, 762 pages;

- Sean Spicer's May 3, 2017, statements to the press regarding James Comey (SCR005), 445 documents, 2,572 pages;

The George Papadopoulos documents

There's just one bullet point of communications pertaining to Papadopoulos. This list must reflect the list of those who might be of interest in the Russian inquiry. Note that Jeff Sessions is not included.

- White House communications concerning campaign and transition communications between Manafort, Gates, Gordon, Kellogg, Page, Papadopoulos, Phares, Clovis and Schmitz (SCR006), 75 documents, 978 pages;

A second tranche of Mike Flynn documents

Then there are two more bullets of Mike Flynn documents, first seeking campaign and transition communications involving Russian Federation officials, and then seeking the 2,990 pages on the May 10, 2017 meeting with Sergei Lavrov. We should expect a ton of prep work in advance of such a meeting, so the number might not be that surprising. But it is the largest set of documents.

- White House communications regarding campaign and transition communications between Michael Flynn and Sergey Kislyak or other Russian Federation officials (SCR007), 303 documents, 912 pages;

- May 10, 2017, White House meeting with Russian Federation officials (SCR008), 808 documents, 2,990 pages;

The June 9 meeting documents

Only after those Flynn related comms did Mueller ask for June 9 meeting documents. They asked for three things: Documents pertaining to the June 9 meeting (note, this doesn't include a request for the follow-up discussions in November).

Then, a list of those who were involved in Don Jr's press statements. Finally, all the comms from those people. The number of these documents is suspiciously small, particularly as compared to the volume turned over to SJC.

- June 9, 2016, meeting between Donald Trump, Jr., and Natalia Veselnitskaya (SCR009), 117 documents, 1,821 pages;
- July 8, 2017, Air Force One participants regarding Donald Trump, Jr., press statements concerning Veselnitskaya meeting (SCR010), 1 document, 1 page;
- Communications of individuals identified in category number 10 (SCR011),

141 documents, 284 pages.

Jim Comey documents

Finally, there are documents pertaining to Jim Comey's firing. This suggests Mueller didn't ask for these documents until at least July 2017.

- Meetings between the President and James Comey (SCR012), 109 documents, 725 pages;
- The decision to terminate James Comey (SCR013), 442 documents, 1,455 pages;
