

ATTORNEY GENERAL BILL BARR HAS A HIGHER OPINION OF GEORGE PAPADOPOULOS' DIRT THAN STEVE BANNON DOES

I'm working my way through the Mueller 302s that Jason Leopold liberated. But given current events, I thought it worthwhile to elevate this passage from a February 14, 2018 interview Mueller's office had with Steve Bannon.

Bannon never worked with Papadopoulos on setting up the meetings despite Papadopoulos's offers through email. Bannon would generally blow off Papadopoulos and thought to himself "I don't need this guy." Flynn would be on the hook for the meetings Papadopoulos was suggesting, and Bannon did not need Papadopoulos. Papadopoulos never told Bannon about the Russians having dirt on Clinton, and Bannon never heard Papadopoulos tell anyone else in the campaign, such as Sam Clovis, that the Russians had dirt on Clinton. Bannon had all the dirt he needed from Clinton Cash and Uranium One, he didn't need any more dirt. Bannon didn't need any more dirt from "clowns" like Papadopoulos and Clovis. (PDF 125)

Bannon, who remembered virtually nothing about his extensive interactions with Erik Prince (whom he admitted to respecting), remembered distinctly that he blew off all George Papadopoulos' offers to help set up a meeting with President Abdel Fattah al-Sisi, even though he admitted knowing he had to find a way to make

Trump look credible as a Commander in Chief.

After stating (months after Papadopoulos' plea deal was announced) that he didn't remember hearing anything about Papadopoulos offering dirt, Bannon then said he didn't need dirt from Papadopoulos, as if it had been offered.

Anyway, Steven Bannon, who hangs out with some pretty dodgy types, calls Papadopoulos and his investigative leads a "Clown."

That would mean that the Attorney General of the United States, who has been traveling the world on a wild goose chase for something – anything!! – that might corroborate Papadopoulos' conspiracy theories, has a higher estimation of Papadopoulos' dirt than Steve Bannon.
