

OPEN THREAD: THE MORNING AFTER ELECTION DAY 2025

[NB: check the byline, thanks. /~Rayne]

With the election yesterday of Millennial Zohran Mamdani as New York City's mayor, generational change in Democratic Party politics has shifted more firmly away from Boomers.

(source)

With the youngest Boomers in their mid-60s, it's time – not to mention other reasons like a lifetime of baggage impeding effective governance.

This is an open thread with an emphasis on state and local elections. More details about elections across the country will be published here as updates throughout the day. In the mean time, discuss election results in your state and municipality here; what are the implications of the elections' results, and what blowback might we expect? What effects may these elections have on the 2026 mid-term elections?