

WATERBOARDING IS FAIR GAME

I'm pooped so will have to return to this article. It explains how, after DOJ under Jack Goldsmith threw out John Yoo's torture policies, Steven Bradbury came in and replaced them with still worse opinions.

When the Justice Department publicly declared torture "abhorrent" in a legal opinion in December 2004, the Bush administration appeared to have abandoned its assertion of nearly unlimited presidential authority to order brutal interrogations.

But soon after Alberto R.