LETTING INSURANCE WRITE THE BILL: HOW BAD IS THAT?

Ezra has written a thoughtful follow-up to my complaint that discussions of the role of insurance company in writing our legislation neglect to discuss profit. I agree with parts of it and disagree with others. The most important point Ezra makes—which explains his focus on providers to the exclusion of insurance companies—is this passage:

The insurance industry is not a particularly profitable industry.