

THE COUNT OF MONTE CRISTO WAS NOT FICTION

As someone who received her PhD in Comparative Literature just months before Bush was selected and who has read maybe ten fictional books since I stopped teaching fiction, I feel obliged to point to—and comment on—Chris Bowers’ post on “The Rise of the Non-Fictional Aesthetic.”

This decade seems to have brought on a broad shift in the leftist aesthetic in America.