THREE THINGS: WHEN THE HANGOVER ENDS

Republicans are too relaxed and smug after last week. We can see their emperor has no clothes and their asses are showing, too.

MIDNIGHT IN WASHINGTON: TODAY'S SENATE VOTE [UPDATE-2]

This post is dedicated to today's U.S. Senate's proceedings with regard to the trial of Donald J. Trump under articles of impeachment for abuse of power and obstruction of Congress. You'll note I'm not holding my breath for impartial justice.

THREE THINGS: DAY AFTER NIGHT BEFORE

DAY OF DISASTER [UPDATE-2]

What a flaming mess. Bet you can't really tell which mess I'm referring to – the Iowa caucuses, the State of the Union Address, or the rolling not-trial of Donald J. Trump.

HITTING THE OSCILLATOR: TODAY'S SENATE VOTE ON WITNESSES [UPDATE-5]

The output hits the fan today as the Senate votes on whether to call and hear witnesses. But this may also be the entire enchilada shoved into the blades of the rotator – they may vote on conviction and acquittal. This is an open thread.

THREE THINGS: ODD, ODDER, ODDITIES

Just a few oddities as the White House presents its counter arguments to impeachment. This is an open thread.

IMPEACHMENT = GROUNDS FOR FIRING

You'd think we were all in Newfoundland buried beneath multiple feet of snow given the blizzard of bullshit Trump and his reality TV cast have been spewing. The truth they want to bury is a rather familiar phrase.

THREE THINGS: 'SHE'S GOING TO GO THROUGH SOME THINGS'

House Intelligence Committee released some materials provided to them by Lev Parnas, revealing Trump's Ukraine scandal is even uglier than expected. Here's three things the public now needs.

CROSSFIRE HURRICANE GLOSSARY

A glossary of some of the names, acronyms, and titles in the DOJ IG Report on Carter Page.

EXPLAIN IT TO ME:

WHAT DOES IMPEACHMENT MEAN NOW?

The Articles of Impeachment were pretty straightforward. But what of Trump's re-election and the scope of presidential pardons?
